Special Offers of Tulip Collections

The increasing sales and re-orders for our TULIP COLLECTIONS from year to year are convincing proof that our customers are well pleased with them, and we are confident that each new purchaser will be fully satisfied as well.

Each collection is made up from meritorious kinds only, and to give the greatest color range in the respective class.

These collections are offered at far less than the price of the listed varieties. We are enabled to make these offers for the reason that we can equalize our stock to better advantage, and often include choice rare varieties that do not sell readily. This does not mean that we use undesirable kinds, as we do not stock any inferior varieties.

We want to emphasize the fact that only TOP SIZE bulbs are used, and also that these collections are real bargains.

The Breeder Tulips

Present day Breeder Tulips are the direct descendants of the old original tulips that were such favorites in Holland centuries ago, having been bred from, and developed from this old sturdy type.

They have retained and even increased their early robustness greatly, and with this there has been created a remarkable variety of color tones that no pen can describe.

Predominating color tones are rich purples, violets and golds, with buff, brown, bronze, lavender, and blendings of these into harmonious combinations. Many exquisite pastel colors and hues may also be included.

The flowering period is approximately the same as the Darwins, and the two classes combine perfectly to give color effects of great beauty in the garden.

The figure following the variety name indicates the relative time of flowering.

Cottage and Hybrid Tulips

The Cottage and Hybrid May Flowering tulips comprise a great range of variation in different forms and colors. Some have long slender flowers, others round or oval, while many, with long pointed petals that reflex gracefully, resemble brilliantly colored lilies.

Many unusual blendings of delicate hues and color combinations may be found among them, and also the warm tones of orange and scarlet. Some of the finest yellow tulips will be found in this group.

Most Cottage tulips bloom a little later than the Darwin and Breeder types, though a few of the hybrids will bloom earlier. Their lasting qualities are quite exceptional, either as cut flowers or when left in the garden. Their habit of growth is strong and robust.

Superb Hyacinths

No other plant requires so little coaxing to produce its fragrant wealth of colorful flowers. Indoors the bulbs are easy to grow—so simple that anyone can be sure of delightful blossoms during late winter. Outdoors, Hyacinths bloom early and warm the flower border with their glory of fragrant beauty even before the tulips blossom.

GROWING HYACINTHS INDOORS

Hyacinths may be grown in water quite as successfully as in soil, and with fine results. A tall glass or deep bowl should be used in order that the heavy roots may have room to develop fully. The bulb should be supported, or held high enough so as to allow plenty of water below, and placed firmly so that the base of the bulb just touches the water. Fill in water to this level as often as needed.

Growing Hyacinths in pots is a simple matter; a four or five inch pot for the larger bulbs, or a larger, low pot for several smaller bulbs may be used. Plant the bulb so that the top comes about level with the soil, but nearly an inch below rim of pot, as the roots are apt to push the bulb higher and not leave enough space to water. In potting, be sure that there is free drainage at bottom. After planting, Hyacinths should be put away in a cool, dark place, until plenty of roots have developed and may then be brought into the light, and a warmer temperature.

OUTDOOR CULTURE

Plant Hyacinths so that top of bulb is about five inches under the surface, water thoroughly, and cover with leaves or coarse hay before severe cold weather sets in. Covering for Hyacinths should be quite heavy. Remove covering as early as snow or ice will permit. If already sprouted it is best to replace a little of the covering as a shade, to keep the direct rays of the sun away until the tender sprouts have gotten used to the light.

Multiflowered Hyacinths

These Hyacinths have been developed through a new cultural method, and a special process of preparation by a leading Specialist of Hyacinths in Holland. In place of the large densely flowered spike of the ordinary Hyacinth, these produce from 6 to 10 smaller, and more graceful spikes of flowers that resemble Roman Hyacinth blooms.

These Hyacinths are particularly suited to growing indoors during the winter, but may be grown in the garden in the regular manner.

The cultural treatment is the same as indicated for the ordinary Hyacinths.

Narcissi and Daffodils

Mrs. Barclay, Barri Narcissus

Red Chief, Barri Narcissus

Eagle, Poeticus Narcissus

The genus Narcissi comprises a large family of varied species of bulbous plants. They are related to, and botanically belong to the Amaryllidaceae genera, but distinct from the commoner form of these.

The name Narcissi, or Narcissus, comes down to us from mythology, and was the name given a wild flower belonging to this species, and from which has been developed through the centuries the many beautiful types of flowers we now know by this name.

Through common usage the large trumpet varieties are generally referred to as "Daffodils," the short-cupped kinds are usually termed "Jonquils," and the white and cluster-flowered are just "Narcissi" without further distinction.

With the exception of the Polyantha types (see page 16), which are best suited for indoor culture in the north, the varieties listed here are hardy, and will adapt themselves to the garden, multiplying from year to year, and where their gay, cheerful flowers are a most refreshing note of early spring.

Crocus are the first flowers to greet us in the spring, often before all ice and snow has disappeared.

Planted in a sunny protected location they break into bloom, just about as quickly as the frozen ground will permit them to.

They may be planted in small groups in the flower border, in the rock garden, or dotted around in the lawn, along the edges of walks or wherever enough space is available where the sun shines. They will give a delightful greeting soon after the wintry blasts are over.

For best results PLANT TOP SIZE BULBS ONLY. Each produces many flowers. Largest flowering TOP SIZE bulbs of above. Doz. 50c; 100 $3.50
